ALPINE PIPES

HISTORY

Alpine pipes (German: Gesteckpfeife or also Jägerpfeife or Hunter's pipe) are traditional pipes originally used by the farmers, shepherds, huntsmen and local population of the Bavarian, Austrian, South Tyrolean, and Swiss Alps, but could also be found in other European countries like Bohemia and Hungary. Later, their use also spread to the lowlands, the cities and other countries.

Their construction consists in being assembled or "put together" of several parts – mouthpiece, one (or several) middle pieces and a pipe bowl; sometimes a metal cap or windshield was added to protect the bowl from exposure to rain and wind.

The bowl could have been made from (a variety of) wood(s) or porcelain, the latter often decoratively painted by hand. Sometimes, the pipe was further adorned with elaborately crafted metal or horn elements.

THE LIMITED EDITION ALPINE PIPES

This impressive White Spot pipe is a recreation of a very special pipe that we manufactured in 1936 and which rests today in our archive.

As its construction follows the same principle as the traditional "Gesteckpfeifen" our staff fondly named it THE ALPINE.

This hand-turned pipe is composed of four components. Briar was used to turn both the pipe bowl and Y-shaped connection piece while the stem and the mouthpiece are hand-worked from solid vulcanite rods.

Archive Pipe in special case (1936)

When fully assembled The Alpine pipe measures approximately 32cm (12.5) inches in length.

The pipes are fitted in a special Ventage case. The Ventage pipe case was invented by Alfred Dunhill in 1919 and patented the following year. The name is a combination of the words "Vintage" and "ventilation", as those cases are equipped with a ventilation channel so that the used pipe can continue to dry in the closed case.

This production is limited to only 10 units worldwide (all finishes combined).

Launch July 2017.

Mr. Richard Dunhill will be remembered by all those who met him for being an advocate and enthusiastic promoter of pipe smoking and for his boundless love for the product.

He was awarded the "Pipe Smoker of the Year" award in 2002 by the British Pipesmokers' Council, was Past Master of the Livery Company Worshipful Company of Pipe Manufacturers and Tobacco Blenders in 1987-88 and graded for many years our top pipes.

Over the years, Mr. Richard's position and his lifelong experience in the company, his gentleman demeanour and his statesmanlike looks made him the ideal global brand ambassador for the company. Unforgotten are the occasions when he hosted HM The Queen at the Queens Polo Cup.

He was actively involved in the Centenary of Alfred Dunhill Ltd and helped to compose the Centenary book Alfred Dunhill: one hundred years or more.

His passion for Meccano, of which he was one of the largest collectors in the UK, fuelled the building and exhibition of an extraordinary window in the Jermyn Street Boutique in 2004, executed by the West London

Meccano Society. Equally, he was an important collector of cigarette cards, tobacco jars and an avid backgammon player; the backgammon tournament that he organised 43 years ago on board the ocean liner Queen Elizabeth II has become legend.

Mr. Richard also possessed a keen sense of humour. A prime example of his wit - following the close encounter of his cherished pipe with his dog - can be seen below in his own writing and words.

We are very saddened about Mr. Richard Dunhill's passing on 26th August 2016, aged 89, peacefully at home surrounded by his family.

ART DECO PERIOD

Art Deco is a style of design, architecture and art that first appeared in Paris, France just before World War I.

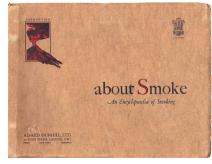

The Chrysler building, the Empire State building and other skyscrapers in New York built during the 1920s and 1930s are testament to Art Deco style. But also general household objects, furniture, jewellery, crystal ware, theatres, cinemas as well as cars, trains and ships were strongly influenced by the Art Deco movement.

Famous representatives of the Art Deco style were René Lalique, Louis Cartier, Boucheron and Émile-Jacques Ruhlmann.

During the Great Depression in the 1930's, Art Deco became more subdued and new materials and finishes were introduced like chrome plated metal, stainless steel and plastic. Art Deco became one of the first truly international styles, but its dominance waned with the dawn of World War II

It was in the mid 1920's, when Art Deco had become the established design style, when Alfred Dunhill published the fifth edition of his comprehensive product catalogue About Smoke – An Encyclopedia of Smoking containing a variety of products, both pipes and accessories, designed in the prevalent Art Deco style.

About Smoke (5th Edition), 1924

1920's ART DECO PIPE SET

This interesting limited edition is a set consisting of two Quaint pipe shapes recently rediscovered in the fifth edition of Alfred Dunhill's catalogue About Smoke – An Encyclopedia of Smoking dating from around 1924. These iconic shapes are a real rarities as they have not been manufactured in more than 50 years.

Both shapes are extremely elegant, perfectly embody the style synonymous with the Art Deco period and seamlessly complement each other as a pair due to their similar shape of the bowl - the straight "KF" in group 4 in Chestnut finish and the slightly smaller bent "GE" in group 3 in County finish.

Both pipes are fitted with stylish Sterling silver bands engraved with fine Art Deco patterns and the pipes are housed in a special two-pipe "dog-bone" Ventage case.

Ventage cases were invented by Alfred Dunhill in 1919 and a patent was granted in 1920. Its name derives from the combination of the words "Vintage" and "Ventilation", as those cases are equipped with ventilation vents / channels running from the pipe bowl to the edge of the case to allow the pipes to continue to vent when put back into their closed case.

Each set is also accompanied by its numbered limited edition certificate.

This edition series is strictly limited to 100 sets worldwide.

Launch July 2017.
